On November 13, 2024, Chitkara University, Punjab, warmly welcomed Jen Dollin from Western Sydney University (WSU), Australia. A distinguished advocate for sustainability, Ms. Dollin inaugurated the university's extended organic mushroom production unit, a forward-thinking initiative to promote sustainable agriculture on campus.

In her expert talk, "Integrating Sustainable Practices into University Ecosystem," Ms. Dollin engaged Chitkara's faculty and shared actionable insights on embedding sustainability within academic and operational frameworks. Her emphasis on collaborative efforts to address global challenges inspired attendees to rethink conventional practices and embrace environmentally responsible strategies. This special occasion, aligned with the ethos of kindness and sustainability, reinforced Chitkara University's commitment to fostering sustainable development.

The visit marked a significant step in strengthening international academic ties and promoting meaningful practices that contribute to a greener, more compassionate world. This was organised by the Office of International Affairs, Chitkara University.

Jen Dollin shared her knowledge on the pedagogy they adopted at WSU, Australia, to create awareness of SDGs for their students, and how to generate in students the curiosity about SDGs. It was a very impactful session indeed!!
